Stressors Before and During Pregnancy – part 1

This is a report on the Pregnancy Risk Assessment Monitoring System (PRAMS), a survey conducted on a sample of Vermont women with live births during calendar years 2001-2009. Included in the survey are questions that ask women about stressful events that may have occurred during the 12 months before giving birth to their most recent baby.

This report gives an overview of the data on stressors for 2009, and examines trends from 2001-2009. Future reports will provide a demographic breakdown of the more recent data and examine the relationship between stressful events and birth outcomes and maternal behaviors.

The question wording and response categories are included at the end of this report.

Stressful Events Before and During Pregnancy

- In 2009, 72% of mothers reported at least one stressful life event during the year prior to their most recent live birth, 6% reported six or more stressors.
- The single most common reported stressor was moving to a new address, reported by 34% of mothers.
- 27% reported having bills they could not pay.
- 24% reported a close family member was hospitalized.
- 23% argued more than usual with their spouse or partner.
- 16% reported someone close to them had a problem with alcohol or drugs.
- 10% reported eating less than they should because they did not have enough money to buy food.

Types of Stress

- Financial stress was most widely reported, with 54% reporting at least one financial stressor in the 12 months prior to giving birth.
- 30% reported emotional stress during the year before delivery.
- 29% reported partner stress.
- 20% reported traumatic stress.

Trends in Stress Reporting, 2001-2009

- Financial stress was significantly lower in 2005-2006 than in other years.
- Most indicators were reported less in 2005 and 2006.
- Traumatic stress was higher in 2009 than other years, but the difference is not statistically significant.
