Introduction

This brief provides a summary of key data points about the professional identity of community health workers (CHWs) derived from a May 2021 survey of 128 CHWs and 33 CHW employers from across Vermont. The survey, conducted by the Vermont Department of Health (VDH), in collaboration with the Vermont CHW Steering Committee, represents an ongoing effort by VDH to collect information about the roles, scope of work, skills, and training of the current CHW workforce in the state.

Vermont CHW Definition

In 2019, the Vermont CHW Steering Committee developed a Vermont CHW definition to promote understanding and recognition of the role. 96% of CHWs agreed that the definition describes their work.

Vermont CHW Definition:
A Community Health Worker (CHW) is a frontline public health professional who is a trusted member of or has a close understanding of the community being served. A CHW uses a person-centered approach to build trusting relationships that enable the CHW to serve as a liaison between health and social services and the community to facilitate access to services and improve the quality and cultural and linguistic competence of service delivery. In addition, a CHW increases self-sufficiency, wellbeing and positive health outcomes through a range of activities such as outreach, community education, supportive guidance, self-management, coaching and the provision of social support and advocacy.

Job Titles

CHWs can go by many titles, while still fulfilling the same duties as a CHW. CHWs listed over 47 different job titles, with SASH coordinator (27%), CHW (26%), and family support worker (14%) being the top three most common. In comparison, CHW employers listed over 32 different titles for those they employ/supervise, with CHW (33%), community care coordinator (17%), and outreach specialist (17%) being the most common.
Scope of Practice

The activities that CHWs most commonly mentioned performing in their positions include bridging the gap between individuals, communities, and the health and social services systems (86%); advocating for individuals and communities (79%); and participating in care coordination and system navigation (75%).

The activities that CHW employers reported as the most common among their CHWs were slightly different. The most common activities reported by CHW employers were bridging the gap between individuals, communities, and the health and social services systems (85%); providing direct service (81%); participating in care coordination and system navigation (78%); and providing health coaching and social support (78%).

Populations and Services

CHWs work with a variety of populations and with a variety of mental and physical health conditions. The most common special populations CHWs reported working with are individuals with disabilities (66%), older adults (62%), and individuals with a substance use disorder or who are in recovery (55%). The most common health conditions or chronic diseases that CHWs address include mental/behavioral health (62%), diabetes (57%), and substance use (53%). When asked which race/ethnicity groups they mostly work with, CHW’s reported working with white (92%), Black/ African American (21%), Asian/Asian American (17%), Hispanic/Latino (14%), Native American/Indigenous/First Nation (12%) and Native Hawaiian/Other Pacific Islander (8%).

- Food assistance organizations/food pantries (84%)
- Mental/behavioral health services (80%)
- Housing (69%)

1 A note about survey methods and respondents: Data for this brief was gathered from a web-based survey (administered 05/03/2021–05/28/2021) of a convenience sample of CHWs and CHW employers across Vermont. A total of 145 CHWs and 33 CHW employers responded to the survey. Upon analysis, VDH and PDA excluded 17 participants from the analysis as they did not appear to be CHWs. This was the second year VDH gathered information via surveys about CHW professionals and organizations that engage CHWs. It is not clear the extent to which the responses are representative of all CHWs or all organizations that engage CHWs in Vermont.

ii Support and Services at Home
